BETHEL SCOUTS TO HOLD CAMPOREE AT EAST ANDOVER

FRIDAY-SATURDAY, JUNE 18-20

On Friday, June 18th Bethel Troop 163 B. S. A. leave for their Camporee weekend. This will be held in East Andover this year on a plot of ground generously donated by Scouter Phil Chadbourn.

The location was selected to enable the Scouts to conduct a fishing derby. Two streams are nearby, one of them running through the camping area, and a large part of the week end schedule will be devoted to the fishing derby with the grand prize of a rod and reel being presented at the Saturday night campfire. Also included in the schedule is a nature scavenger hunt with a pocket compass as a prize and several other races and Scout games. A full week end of fine outdoor camp life is planned with activities scheduled from 6:00 a. m. to 10:00 p. m. in the morning to the last note of Taps from the Troop Bugler.

The Troop trailer which has seen little use in recent years is to be hurried into shape for the trip.

There will be at least three leaders present at all times and it is hoped that several of the Scouts' fathers will join their sons for at least a portion of the week end. Facilities for sleeping are available for several more leaders and assistants in the headquarters tent. If any father or friend would care to assist as well as enjoy the week end of camping please contact Scoutmaster Charles Helms or Dr. Trindard.

All scouts will supply their own food, shelter, bedding and other camping gear and cooking will be done by patrols.

A little something extra has been planned for Sunday, June 20th. Being Father's Day and the day of the week when the family often packs the picnic and takes to the road, it is hoped that as many Scout families and other interested parties as possible will join the Troop for dinner, camp inspection, and breaking camp. The local Scouts need your support badly and this should be an easy and enjoyable way to show them that you're behind them. Follow the signs and arrows from Andover. You can drive directly to the camp site. See you there.

"If you are my wife—where'd you get the money?"

WOODSTOCK

Adelbert Bowen held the interest of the young people at the Seventh-day Adventist Missionary Volunteer meeting June 4 as he described to them the lives of several outstanding pioneers of the Adventist movement, and then called on them to identify them.

He first described Elder James White, called "the father of his people." Elder White was the one who pioneered in the publishing of the religious paper, "The Present Truth," working on Paris Hill, Maine. He worked and sacrificed and prayed to make this publication a success.

The next pioneer described by Mr. Bowen was William Farnsworth, the first Seventh-day Adventist, in that he was the first to accept the seventh day Sabbath. The old home of the Farnsworth family, from whom have come many missionaries for the denomination, stands in Washington, N. H. There stands also the first Seventh-day Adventist church, still carrying on.

A woman was the next pioneer on the program. She was Rachel Oakes Preston, a Seventh-day Baptist, who brought the truth of the Bible Sabbath to the Adventists, and then joined them. It was she who taught this truth to William Farnsworth.

In describing Captain Joseph Bates, Mr. Bowen said, "He was so zealous that he spent all his money to help send out religious literature."

Another outstanding family of Seventh-day Adventists was that of Joseph Hare, an Irish missionary of the Methodist Church who had devoted himself to the conversion and uplift of the Maoris of New Zealand. He and 40 members of his family, children and grandchildren, accepted the Adventist faith. There is scarcely a land on the face of the globe where the services of this missionary family have not been given.

Stir up the gift of God, which is in thee, (1 Timothy 1:6). Read 1 Timothy 1:1-7.

It is one thing to rejoice in the wonderful heritage handed down to us. It is quite another thing to do and share as worthy of the past that the influence which we make on today's environment becomes itself a heritage which our children's children will look back upon.

Can you hear them saying to their children, "Those ancestors we had back in 1624 were stout-hearted people. They gave expression to a way of life which makes it easier for us to know the truth, to enjoy the beautiful, to walk in the path of honor?"

Yes, it is very important for the Timothys of our day to have mothers like Eunice and grandmothers like Lois. Real joy in worship is realized when each new generation takes the unfeigned faith of their ancestors, and rekindles it in a new fire of light and love and loyalty for the generations yet to come.

Prayer

May we be faithful to our Christian heritage, our Father. May it bud and blossom anew in our generation, to the end that a rich harvest of golden fruit may be gathered tomorrow. In the name of the Saviour who teaches us to pray, "Our Father who art in heaven... Amen."

Thought For The Day

GOULD WINS STATE TRACK MEET AT COLBY COLLEGE

Goald retained its class "M" title in track over a strong field of competitors at a meet held at Colby College last Saturday. Goald had 42½ points drawing away from contending Presque Isle in the last two events. The second place finishers were close all afternoon and wound up with 30½ points. The victory was Goald's second straight, and third in the last four years and retired the State Trophy for the Huskies. It is interesting to note that Goald has now won the State Track Championship in Class "M" six times out of the last nine years.

Richard Trimbach was a triple winner with victories in the 100, 220 and broad jump. Other individual champions for Goald were Carman "Skip" Pettapiece in the javelin, James Murphy in the 44 mile and Roland Blood in the 44 mile for a total of 5 first places. These four boys will compete in the New England Track Meet to be held at Durham, New Hampshire on Saturday, June 12. Class M Summary:

REV. ROBERT H. HARPER

Amos Denounces Intemperance (Temperance Lesson)
Lesson for June 13: Amos 2: 11-12; 4: 1-2 & 1-7.

Golden Text: Romans 13: 13.

In this lesson we find Amos giving attention to a very distressing thing in regard to the use of strong drink - the efforts put forth by drinkers to induce others to share in their carousals. For they offered wine to Nazarenes, the members of a very strict sect who gave themselves wholly to the service of God and denied themselves the use of wine.

Amos also found that women were indulging freely in strong drink. In no flattering terms, the prophet called them the "kine," cows, of Bashan. It is a lamentable thing that so many women of the present are indulging in the use of strong liquor. The whole attitude of the large number of women in our country seems changed to- ward the matter of drink. It is seen in the glittering cocktail bars and cocktail lounges present nearly everywhere.

The prophet warned the peo- ple in general against the evils of strong drink and urged them to think of the doom that threatened their nation with the continuance of their carousals. The nation, he insisted, was in imminent danger from foes that were attacking from within, and the men and women who were holding high carnival would be the first to be taken captives into a strange land. Beware of the evil that ruined Israel in the long ago.

LOCKE MILLS

— Mrs. Mary Mills, Corrae. —

At the Men's Club meeting last Wednesday evening a committee was appointed to make arrangements for improving the ball field. Those appointed were Earl Bacon, Merle Lurvey, Lee Mills, Orlando Jordan and Donald Bennett. On Sunday, in spite of the frequent showers, several men with a bulldozer trucks and a loader to aid in the work, accomplished very much toward getting the ball field into shape before the games begin.

Last Friday evening many attended the plays by the three rooms of the Locke Mills school at the town hall. The program began with a piano solo by Mrs. Betty Tebbets substituting for Madeline Swan. Next on the program was a play, "The Kiddies Carnival" by the Primary Room. A piano solo by Carmen Martin was rendered after which a play, "The Kid From the East" was given by the Intermediate room. Last on the program was a play by the grammar school entitled, "The Old District School." The plays were good, and were much enjoyed. Much credit is due the teachers, pupils, and all those who were asked to help in any way.

Mr. and Mrs. Thomas McMullen of Dorchester, Mass., and Mrs. Lena Foye of East Somerville, Mass., were recent guests of Miss Bertha Kimball and Wesley Kimball.

Mrs. Clyde Dunham returned to her home from the Rumford Hospital last of the week.

The house, formerly known as the Christopher Bryant residence, on Main Street is being razed. James Spinnery is in charge of the job.

Carroll Pulkkinen was recently bitten by a dog, and ten stitches were required to close the wound. The Community Club met at the town hall on Tuesday evening with twenty four members present, and there were eight visitors. The Club voted to have the piano at the hall tuned, and Mrs. Louise Seames was asked to make arrangements. It was voted to have a supper and a sale sometime in August. There will also be an entertainment following the supper. Those on the committee for the sale are Mrs. Abbie Valley, Mrs. Lorraine Pfaudler, and Mrs. Bertha Davis. Supper committee is Cora Bennett, Edith Littlefield and Ada Cummings. Those appointed to the entertainment committee are Margery Swan, Louise Seames, Elsie Bennett and Barbara Wakefield. CATCHING

By
*Ray Schalk

From the book "How to Play"

published by The Sporting News

NATURAL EQUIPMENT

Chapter 10

The job of catching, in my estimation, is the toughest assignment on the field of play. It has always been my claim that baseball is played for the benefit of the catcher. My claim is that he is the one player who has the game squarely in front of him, he faces both the infield and the outfield and also has the base runners in full view. Thus, he is the one player in position to see everything that is going on.

For a young player seeking to make good as a catcher, adequate physical equipment is the first requisite. By that I not only mean a sound body, but a good pair of hands and a strong throwing arm. Also, it is necessary to have a cool head, as well as the ability to think quickly. A catcher must be able to take all the knocks that come with his job, day after day; banged-up and broken fingers; the spit and heated hands; the bumping and the cuts from collisions and spikes on close plays at home plate.

Aside from nature's equipment, the young player seeking to succeed as a catcher cannot be too careful about his choice of equipment—mitt, protector, mask and shoes. All should fit him snugly and comfortably.

It was always my firm conviction that the catcher and pitcher should have no more than two or three sets of signals, the better the better. The better should function as flexibly as possible, and catching can prove more costly than for the pitcher and catcher to get worked up to their signals. From experience I have found that this frequently happens when the pitcher is working with more than two or three sets of signals.

The catcher can use a glove sign, or a knee sign, along with his voice and wags. Use of the glove or knee in flexing the sign to the pitcher emphasizes the maneuver of going into a squatting position and then standing erect, thus saving plenty of energy over a period of years.

Footwork around the home plate is a most important factor to a catcher's play. Shifting requires alertness, and if a catcher can go to his right as effectively as to his left, that is all in his favor and adds to his value. The catcher should move out in front of the plate when a throw is coming in from the outfield and, whenever possible, receive the ball on the fly. Then the catcher can slide back to the plate with the base runner, keeping ahead of him so as to complete the tag and retire him. In my opinion, this is one of the most effective plays a catcher can make and, from the viewpoint of the fan, one of the best to watch from the stands.

Completing this play requires gameness on the part of the catcher. He does not have a leg to lean on, as the first baseman has when he receives a thrown ball from an infielder, or as one of the other infielders has on a force play. Unless the bases are full, making it a force play, the catcher must charge the base runner, who is coming into the home plate at top speed, hitting the ground in his slide, his spikes flashing and with the one thought of knocking over the catcher and scoring his run. On such plays, the catcher is like the fullback on the gridiron bucking the line. That is why it is advisable for the catcher to move well up in front of the plate whenever it is safe to leave his position after a ball has been hit and base runners are racing around the bases. I repeat—the throw-in in the plate should be received on the fly, when possible, so the catcher will be in position to slide into the plate with the runner attempting to score, keeping ahead of him in order to tag him out.

Learn to go after pop fouls from all angles. Use high ones behind, or to either side of, the home plate, and those in the vicinity of first or third base. Learn the trickiness of sliders, for they differ in all ball parks. Allow for the wind. To become adept in this all-important department of catching, one has to practice constantly. I cannot emphasize this too strongly.

As related to Harold W. Landon.

This is the tenth in a series of articles to help give proper instruction on how to play to Ray Schalk. Future columns will include pitching, fielding and base running.
